Women on Wall Street?

- What are the career options today?
- What do career paths look like?
- Has Wall Street lost its sex appeal?
- Recommendations for women (and men) thinking about a job in finance.

If you’re struggling to make heads or tails of what the best opportunity for you is in finance, then this is the talk for you. Terri will clearly explain what different roles and responsibilities are in the world of finance. She will then walk through what career paths could look like and how the evolution of financial services could impact those careers. Finally, she will give career advice (strictly from her own perspective) to women thinking about financial careers in finance.

Biography
After graduating with a math degree from MIT in 1994, Terri Duhon joined JPMorgan and spent 10 years working as a derivative trader. In 2004 she became an entrepreneur and in 2016 sold her main business to a partner in New York. She has been on the board of CHAPS Co, the board of Operation Smile, the board of the American Overseas School in Rome and was a founding member of the Women’s Leadership Group for the Prince’s Trust. She is the author of How the Trading Floor Really Works. She is currently a public speaker, a lecturer at The Said Business School Oxford University, on the MIT Corporation Visiting Committee and the board of Morgan Stanley International as a Non-Executive Director where she chairs the Risk Committee. In 2018 she was also appointed as Non-Executive Chair of the Board of Morgan Stanley Investment Management for Europe. She lives in London with her husband and 3 children.